DERIVATION OF THE NAME "MACINTOSH." How many people are there who know whence that out useful article, the macintosh, derived its name? In the year 1827 a great deal of curiosity was aroused by the opening of a new shop at No. 58 Charlag Cross, London, by Charles Macintosh & Co., who exhibited for the first time a new garment, named after Mr. Macintosh, who had discovered that rain might be successfully excluded by a cover-ing of rubber on cloth. The garment at once be-same most services. ame most popular, inasmuch as it was a welcome most popular, inasmuch as it was a welcome ubstitute for the clumsy umbrella of that day. Since then the name Macintosh (corrupted by being spatied with a k) has become world-renowned, and the old original shop at No. 58 Charing Cross still produces as good a Macintosh as can be had. Through marriage, the name of the firm carrying on the business is S. Matthews & Son, but the premises are just the same as when first opened in 150, and well worthy of a visit by the American lourist.

THE HUNGARIAN FESTIVAL

BUILDINGS ERECTED FOR THE EXHI-BITION AT BUDAPEST.

HANDSOME STRUCTURES IN THE FAMOUS STADT-WALD-PROGRAMME TO BE CARRIED OUT -THE OPENING ON MAY 2.

The objective point of thousands of American tour ists this year will be beyond the cities on the beaten and romantle country, Hungary. In that capithe central point of the celebration by Hungarians of the thousandth anniversary of their Kingdom. The exhibition there to show to the world the progress made since the conquest of the land by armies of Arpad will be a crowning triumph of an heroic and interesting race. Probably there never has been a celebration more truly national, into which the whole people entered with more pride and months-will be, in fact, an almost continuous holiday for the great mass of Hungarians.

The festivities in connection with the celebration Budapest to be closed, to remain so until the last of October. The schoolrooms are wanted for dormitories for the inhabitants of the provinces, great colonies of whom will descend from time to official programme of the exhibition prope will be introduced with the opening ceremonies by the Emperor and Empress and twenty-nine members of the imperial house on May 2. The Emperor and Empreye-or, rather, the King and Queen, for such they are to Hungarians-will appear at the thanksgiving service in the Coronation Church in The court festivities will last until May 18, when the archdukes and archduchesses will be allowed to disperse. They are to return, however, on June palace, which is to be the most magnificent building

Then will follow the ceremony of doing homage which, in a way, will be a recoronation for the royal pair. Two days before this ceremony the Matthew, and there exhibited for two days. The On June 8 the more solemn part of the programme will be at an end. But then festivities will begin in all parts of the country. Millennium monuments be unveiled in many cities-one in July, five in August, four ir September and three in October. On August 20 the great monument to the memory of St. Stephen will be dedicated in the Buda Forpractical way, as 400 new schools in various parts Cathedral of Kaschan will be consecrated; on September 13 the covering will be taken from the statue of Maria Theresa at Pressburg, and on Sep-tember 27 the great Iron Gate of the Danube will be opened by the King, in the presence of hundreds of princes and potentates. But these are not all. On October 4 the new bridge across the river, binding Buda and Pest, will be turned over to the public, and on October II the new city museum will be opened. The great exhibition will be closed with The apartments for the Emperor Francis Joseph I while at the fair will be in the Roman Building of the Italians toward the end of the fifteenth century. Another attractive feature is a rococo castle, lavishly decorated. Prince Esterhazy has taken possession of one wing, in which a suite of rooms in his castle has been reproduced.

WHAT A CITY PASTOR SEES.

ITEMS OF PERSONAL INTEREST TO CHURCH PEOPLE.

The Rev. Dr. David Gregg, of the Lafayette evenue Presbyterian Church, of Brooklyn, and the Rev. Dr. John Hall, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, of this city, are to exchange pulpits to-day, Dr. Gregg preaching in New-York at 4 p. m., and Dr. Hali preaching in Brooklyn at 8 p. m. Dr. Gregg has the honor of holding the great congregation gathered by the venerable Dr. Cuyler and of increasing the efficiency of this important chairch in all practical directions.

The Young Women's Christian Association has just issued its twenty-fifth annual report, which presents an interesting account of work performed during 18%. Besides the main building in East Fifteenth-st., near Fifth-ave., and the Margaret Louisa Home and Restaurant, directly back of it work-the West Side Settlement, in West Fortyseventh-st., near Tenth-ave.; the Sea Side Home, in Asbury Park, and the Country Home, in White Plains. Classes in bookkeeping, business training. writing, cooking and needlework, not to mention 2.648 pupils. There is also a large Bible class, with nearly 25,000 volumes, is free, and accessible to any woman or girl over fourteen years of age, either self-supporting or preparing for self-support. Another excellent feature of the association is its employment bureau, 2,250 positions having been filled last year. A salesroom containing attractive articles, made by self-supporting women, brought more than $11,000 to seamstresses and consignors. Free concerts, readings and lectures are given during the year, with an average attendance of 600 women. Mrs. Clarence E. Beebe has been president of the association for sixteen years, and has associated with her a large corps of efficient workers, who are making stremuous efforts to secure a large endowment fund. The special need of the association at present is a gymnasium; the little room where the gir's exercise can accommodate only thirty at a time, and the great benefit derived from this branch of the work is necessarily curtailed. But this is only one of many uses for which the quarter of a million dollars are to be devoted in case a generous public gives the association its just deserts. Any person wishing to see for himself what this beneficent institution is accomplishing for thousands of young women cannot do better than to spend an hour there on any week day except Saturday, when he can see how his gift would be applied. woman or girl over fourteen years of age, either

Dr. B. B. Tyler, in the Church of Disciples, in Wes Fifty-sixth-st, concluded last Sunday evening his series of "talks" on "The World's Debt to the Churches," with an address on the Disciples of Christ. He spoke in substance as follows: "The Disciples agree with the Baptists in their fundamental principles, but differ from them in the application of the principles. The Disciples believe in their faithful and constant application regardless of consequences. The rapid numerical increase o the Disciples shows that they have a message for which men are ready. In 1880 they had 3,773 ministers, in 1894 they had 4,940, and in 1895, 5,260. The number of their organized churches in 1890 was were 641,051 communicants in 1890; 871,017 in 1894, and which the world is in debt to the Disciples of Christ They have called attention to the fundamental truth the Historic Section, the façade of which is to be of the Christian religion as no other religious body

Exclusive of the zoological department, which covers $5,000 square metres, the ground devoted to the exhibition is about 520,000 square metres, the buildings covering about 125,000. In this park, at an expense of 5,000,000 florins, 165 halls and pavilions have been erected, in which about seventeen thousand exhibitors will have space for their wares, in addition to the governmental, educational and scientific displaye.

The historical exhibits are housed in a picturesque group of buildings, known as the Historic Section, on the banks of the forest lake, a creation of the architect, and the pride of the people of Budapest. The exterior of the buildings illustrates the history of Hungarian architecture from the first Hungarian King to the present time. The difficult work of combining the various styles into a harmonious whole is said to have been successfully accomplished by M. Alpar. The main entrance, reached after crossing the bridge over the lake, is a reproduction of the portal of the Jaak Church, built in the thirteenth century. This leads to a Freat cloister in the Roman style of the Arpad period. This hall is connected with the Gothic house in which are the relies of Hungarian kings up to the year 1526. A part of this house is in imitation of the Castle Bajda-Hunyad, erected by John Hunyady, "the wild Magyar," in the fifteenth century. The bastions and pillars extend a considerable distance into the lake.

Among the other buildings in this group are the Csüürtötkhely Chapel, the Bartfeld courthouse and the fortress tower of Schässburg, in the Rensissance style. The interior workmanship of the rooms of these structures is beautiful. Not only are the precious relies owned by Hungary and Hungarians preserved in the buildings of the Historic Section, but also the decuments and other things pertaining to the country, lent by the Czar of Russia, the Emperor of Germany, the Sultan of Turkey and other rulers. The most remarkable relics of the early history of Hungary, the symbols of the Hungarian State, have also found places there. They are the old crown which St. Stephen received from the hands of the Pope in the year 1000 A. D.—and with which the present Emperor was crowned in 1857—and the golden buil of King Andrew II, which is the basis of Hungarian freedom and the Hungarian Constitution of to-day. The buil was signed in 1222, six years after Stative creeds they did not become a creedless peo-ple but discovered and laid hold on the creed of Christianity. This creed they think is a simple proposition in which is exhibited the nature and official dignity of Jesus. The proposition is this: Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ, the Son of the Living God and the Saviour of Man. This is not in-deed the fundamental truth of religion, but it is Every person, therefore, desiring membership in a church of the Disciples is required to confess Christ -and nothing else. Every candidate for baptism and church membership is asked if he believes in his heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God; and if he takes Him to be his Saviour? This is a creed that needs no revision. It is divine, God is its author. It sets forth the fact that the Saviour of men is the Son of God-that He is divine -that He is God manifest in the flesh. This creed The exhibition proper is discovered by the exhibition pai groups—historical and modern. The historical christians indorse it. The Disciples are the only pai groups—historical and modern. The historical christians indorse it. The Disciples are the only paid the proper whose creed is heartly indorsed by all who profess and call themselves evangelical Christians. This central truth is the point of departure in all the preachings, worship and study of the Disciples. Theirs is a Christology, rather than a Theology. In all things, at all times, and in all places the Christ with them is given the preeminence. It was no small thing when the Disciples began their work in the early part of the century to cut loose from all human authoritative creeds and lay fast hold on the one divine creed. Their success shows that a church can live and grow and become a power, maintaining the evangelical faith, without a creed of human construction. For this discovery and demonstration the world is indebted to the Disciples of Christ. They originated in a longing desire for peace and unity. Their proposition was to return to the Christianity of the New Testament in faith, in spirit and in covenant. This, they said, will bring Christians into such accord that they can move on as an army to the conquest of the world. They made at the first, and they make now, a distinct and definite proposition looking to the reunion of Christians. Their proposition is that all shall be satisfied with the primitive creed, the primitive ordinances and the primitive life." who profess and call themselves evangelical Chris-

A BEAUTIFUL GUIDE TO SUMMER HOMES. The first of the summer resort books out is the Western Railway. It is an artistic book of 170 pages, and will be sent free to any one inclosing six cents in stamps to pay postage. It describes the beautiful countles of Orange, Sullivan, Uister and Delaware, in this State, through which the road passes. It is not only a timely but a beautiful publication, made bright with many attractive sketches. It gives a list of hotele, farm and boarding houses, with rates of board in a region unsurpassed for beauty and healthfulness. The book may be obtained from any ticket office of the company, or by mail from J. C. Anderson, general passenger agent, of No. 56 Beaver-st. SONS OF ST. GEORGE WILL SMOKE.

PERFUMES THAT LINGER. The sign of the "Old Civet Cat," over the entrance of Messrs. Bayley & Co.'s premises, at No. 94 St. Martin's Lane, London, and the delicious perfumes issuing forth from their doorway, arrest the steps of many an American tourist to their histori-cal locality. Established in 1739, they were at once appointed court perfumers, owing to the marvellous excellency of their specialty, "Ers Bouquet," and the velvetlike qualities of their toilet soaps. It is stated that the Hotel Cecil, London, has given Messrs. Bayley a contract to furnish the hotel their finest toilet soaps.

What The Tribune is doing for its readers.

There was a time, away back in the seventies, when Webster's Dictionary (then as now an excellent work) was so high in price as to be out of the reach of most people.

The Tribune saw an opportunity to work a public service by popularizing "Webster's," and therefore made a wholesale arrangement with its publishers at so low a price as to place the book within the reach of every reader.

SUCH A SERVICE, though much more important, The Tribune is now rendering with regard to that greatest of all works of reference.

PUBLISHED BY THE CENTURY CO. IN 10 LARGE QUARTO VOLUMES.

NEARLY 8,000 ENGRAVINGS.

DICTIONARY, ENCYCLOPEDIA, ATLAS. A LIBRARY IN ITSELF.

The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia,

Which is Greater than any Dictionary, because it goes beyond where mere dictionaries stop and covers the fields of the great encyclopedias, and which is Greater than any Encyclopedia, because no encyclopedia is, like "THE CENTURY," the greatest lexicon ever made by men of English speech.

THE CENTURY CO. recently desired to secure a favorable introduction for the revised, enlarged and improved 10 volume edition of the work (brought down to 1896). The Tribune took advantage of this desire and, after some negotiations, secured for its readers the LOWEST WHOLESALE PRICE EVER CON-

THIS LOWEST WHOLESALE PRICE is obtainable through The Tribune Club, organized to distribute the limited number of sets secured from THE CENTURY CO., and those who join the club effect an average saving of over 40 % from publishers' prices, with the additional advantage of small monthly payments.

Thus each individual is not only placed on a par with the largest wholesale buyer, but is allowed several months in which to pay for the work, which, however, is delivered at once for immediate and constant use and enjoyment.

COMMERCIAL CLUB AT HOME.

IT THROWS OPEN THE DOORS OF ITS NEW HOUSE.

THE ROOMS CROWDED WITH GUESTS ALL THE AFTERNOON-OFFICERS AND COMMITTEE-

The new home of the Commercial Club of this city-in fact, the only home which the club has had since its organization-was opened with a reception which lasted all yesterday afternoon. Nearly all the members of the club and many of their friends had a jolly time there. The rooms are in the top stories of the new Gerken Building, at West Broadway and Chambers-st., and they have been fitted up in a way to meet all the requirements of a firstclass downtown dining club.

A rapid elevator takes the members up to the eleventh floor of the building, on which are the office, library, lounging-room, ladles' reception-room and governors' room of the club. On the twelfth floor is the main dining-room, handsomely fur-nished and well lighted. A ladies' dining-room, a barber-shop and a lavatory are on the same floor. The cafe is in the thirteenth story, with two private dining-rooms. On the top floor is the kitchen, with its perfect modern appliances for cooking, and an ice machine. The wineroom, storeroom and laundry also are on the top floor. Separate dumbwaiters run from the kitchen to the café and main

The Commercial Club was organized to me requirements of the downtown business men on the West Side, and it was not until the Gerken Building was erected that a suitable place for the club could be obtained. The clubrooms in the building, on account of their height above the street level, can be kept cool and comfortable for dining purposes in warm weather, and the view from the windows of all the rooms is extensive and interesting. The limit of membership in the club is 400, and it had been nearly reached before the clubrooms were opened. The officers of the club are: President, George P.

HE RECOGNIZED ZADOC.

Sitting alone on a bench by the deer park in the Zoological Gardens the other sunny day was a wrinkled-faced old woman hard on to sixty years of age, and she had a clay pipe in her hand and asked me for a match to light it. I saw that she was a stranger in town and sat down beside her and asked:

and asked:

"So you have been taking in Central Park to-day?"

"Yaas, bin all around," she replied.

"You are not here alone?"

"Oh, no, Zadoc is here with me, but he got mad and went off down this way awhile ago. I shan't foller him, however. If he wants to stay mad he kin please hisself."

"Have you seen the animals, ma'am?"

"Yaas, and that's what made the trubble. What do you call them critters in the tanks o' water?"

Hippopotamuses, ma'am. Queer looking things, eh?"

"I never saw the beat. The big one has a face.

do you call them criters in the tanks o water;

Hippopotamuses, ma'am. Queer looking things,
eh?"

"I never saw the beat. The big one has a face on to him exactly like Zadoc, and when I said so he got as mad as a wet hen. If we'd been home I guess he'd hev boxed my ears, old as I am. Let Zadoc be lookin' out of a winder at ye and you coundn't tell whether it was him or a 'potamus."

"That's pretty hard on Zadoc," I said.

"Wall, I didn't mean to hurt his feelin's, but I couldn't help but tell him of it. If you are foin down that way you might tell him I want him.
It's about time we went back to the tavers, I guess. Jest look fur an old man who looks like a 'potamus and you'll hit Zadoc."

There was a crowd of fifty people looking at the camels and buffaloes, but I picked Zadoc out at a glance and walked up to him and said:

"Your wife is waiting for you up the path."

"Who am It" he queried as he looked me even
"Zadoc somebody or other."

"How did you know me?"

"Why-why-!" I stammered realizing that I wad trapped, when he rubbed his hands, pushed up his sleeves and interrupted:

"I look like a 'potamus do I! Say, I kin lich four men jest like you all to once, and durn my hide if I don't do it."

I got away from him, but he gave me a run arrough the lion house and might have well a c oliceman hadn't caught him by the ceat-them.
